

Regulate use of lawn chemicals

One threat to our land and water which is not given enough attention is the use of chemicals on green lawns, which do not belong on Cape Cod, anyway.

Certainly, anyone who has lived here for some time is aware of how rarely we see butterflies in the summer. The air used to be filled with Monarchs in the late summer and fall, and now the sight of one is cause for comment. And the insect food for birds is becoming scarce because of the poison being put into our ground and water.

Certainly some regulation should be applied to the use of these poisons.
